Creating a Global Learning Certificate: The What, the Why, and the How

Led by Ambassador Oakley Atterson

Are you interested in the idea of collaborating across the TBR system to create a new global learning certificate program that students can complete in one year based on courses that embed High-Impact Practices? All are welcome to this discussion - faculty, staff, and administrators. The session will begin with background information on similar programs that exist at other community colleges and studies that have recently shown their benefits. After some Q&A time, we will discuss next steps. Students need 21st century skills to thrive and make the world a better place. Let’s do this!

You’re Probably More “HIP” Than You Think

Led by Raquel Adams

TBR faculty offer top quality instruction and curriculum. It’s safe to say that many educators are using High-Impact Practices and don’t even know it! In this session, we will learn what High-Impact Practices are and discuss the purpose of coding of courses by TBR. If your institutions is offering “HIP” courses, it’s time to code them so that students can identify which courses offer these rich experiences for learning. This session is appropriate for those in positions of leadership as well as faculty who are currently teaching a HIPs course, those that believe they may be utilizing HIPs but aren’t quite sure, and those who want to learn more about coding of HIPs courses.

Who Are Your HIP Ambassadors?

Led by Raquel Adams

In this session, we will discuss support for those implementing High-Impact Practices in their courses. Tennessee Board of Regents has recently appointed several High-Impact Practice Ambassadors to provide guidance and training representing each HIP. Attendees will learn which HIPs are currently being coded by TBR as we discuss which Ambassadors have been assigned to each area. We will also review TBR’s repository of resources for building quality HIPs.
